

Is Homework Necessary?

By: Junayd Bazi

I am writing to the principal of CSCNS as I would like you to consider my idea in the schools homework policy. I powerfully believe that homework is not necessary as it wastes time, energy and uses time that you are supposed to be spending with your family. Also if you have younger siblings it will be kind of annoying as they might be shouting too much. Afterschool I don't think any child would like to go home and do their homework. Do you?

Firstly homework eats up the time you have to do other stuff like play with your baby brother or baby sister you will need to pay proper attention to them as they will not always be a baby as time passes by like a caterpillar in a cocoon. When you're done your homework you will want to play with your siblings but your mom might say its bedtime or you will have to do other stuff.

Secondly homework puts into children as they might be trying to get the right answer but they can't do it and stay on the question for a long time. If children get stress it can affect their school studies or home life.

Lastly my teacher has to correct two-hundred and sixteen copies all week because we children do homework. I think that he wants to go home and relax with his pet dog Pixie. Everybody wants to relax at home and do something other than homework!!

In conclusion I would like you to deliberate my belief as expressed in this piece of writing. Ms Doherty I comprehend that you are making a school homework policy soon, so I would like you to think about this piece of writing when you are writing the school's homework policy.
